

To whom it may concern–

Did you know that the USDA estimates that 30 to 40 percent of the United States' food supply ends up as waste in our landfills? As a business owner, you have the unique ability to reduce the amount of food waste and help Americans struggling with hunger. Your business can save money, reduce its environmental impact and help people in your local community by donating leftover meals to your local food bank.

If you're concerned about the legality of donating food, check out the Bill Emerson Good Samaritan Food Donation Act. It protects food donors from liability if they take the necessary precautions to ensure food safety.

Please consider joining the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Food Recovery Challenge or becoming a product partner with Feeding America (www.feedingamerica.org), both of which help participants prevent and divert wasted food in their operations.

As a valued customer of [BUSINESS NAME], I appreciate your awareness of this important issue and hope that you will decide to take action to reduce food waste. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
